FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

TURSDAY, June 21, 6 P. M. The monotony of the Wall street markets was in-terrupted to-day by a very active movement at the Stock Exchange, the activity being the sequence of a sharp decline in prices. Curiously enough this was in opposition to the course that should have

THE WASHINGTON REPORTS. which announced the unanimous opposition of the Senate Finance Committee to the Garfield Currency bill. According to these despatches the committee have reported their non-currence in the House amendments to the original bill—the parliamentary description of Garfield's measure and accordingly a committee of conference have been appointed on the subject. Such is the present situation of the master, but the Washington tele-grams contained the further opinion that there could be no agreement on the ninety-five million bill, as the Senate was firm in insisting upon the original Sumner-Sherman bill. The funding bill was made the special order for Monday next, when it is the intention of one of the members to offer an amendment providing for the issue of $100,000,000 of bonds bearing two per cent interest, convertible at sight into greenbacks and serviceable as a legal reserve with the national banks. Of course the idea of such a bond is so novel that Wall street has not a shadow of doubt that the amendment will be rejected. Were it adopted, however, and the bonds issued, their use as a reserve would be the foundation for the wildest inflation. They would set free $100,000,000 of green-backs and allow the banks to expand $400,000,000 A "PIONIC" AT THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Picnics are popularly supposed to be very enjoyable and innocent affairs. In this case we do not refer to what the concourse in the Long Room call a "picnic," a word which like "jamberee" and other technical expressions of like lik describes the excitement and commotion which attend a "break" in stocks. Perhaps the fact that in both the rural and the Stock Exchange "picnic" things have a way of going down was the original suggestion of the analogy. It remained for to-day's events to prove that the social picnic so generally regarded as healthful and exhibitanting could be damaging and injurious. It shows that the leading operator in Ohio and Mississippi was absent from his usua! the information that he was the head centre of a Sunday school picnic excursion to one of the numerous groves that abound in the suburbs, where the click of the indicator is replaced by the joyens sounds of networks. is replaced by the joyous sounds of nature, &c., &c. The stock had been weak the night before. It was weak this morning also. At the first session of the out courage to resist the attack became panic-stricken. The price broke at the first onset from 40% to 39. The leading operator was not within reach of the telegraph. His partisans ran around in despair. Meantime the price again began to fall and at three o'clock in the afternoon had declined to 37%—shaking out all the weaker holders and many that it had not stopped falling even then. Here a school of the price went back to $8\frac{1}{2}$, but settled down a fraction at the wind up, the whole market closing weak. Considerable indignation was felt that the leading operator should have abandoned his charge in so careless a manner. Many also charge foul play, and point to the fact that the broker who sold the 10,000 shares which started the market on its downward turn was the bayer of the that it had not stopped falling even then. Here a reaction ensued. The price went back to $8%, but settled down a fraction at the wind up, the whole market closing weak. Considerable indignation was felt that the leading operator should have abandoned his charge in so careless a manner. Many also charge foul play, and point to the fact that the stock in the original "bull" movement. They more-over represent that his absence at the picuic excurvictims of the "break," The truth of the whole latter lies in what we have frequently told the public. The cliques are never content with the profits of a steady, continuous movement in the prices of the stocks which they manipulate. They seek to realize forty per cent on a rise of ten per cent, and this they do by alternately selling out and buying back. Ohlo and Mississippi started from 29. At the highest it touched 42-an advance of thirteen per cent. But the clique have doubtless made thirty per cent by the several intermediate movements. The clique who control Lake Shore have sold out to the public. They can break the stock in the same dangerous way at any time. The street was to-day greatly excited over the decline, and all sorts party had sued out an injunction on the New York Central Company for an alleged violation of their white a telegram from Saratoga announced that the enemies of the Erie party had brought suit in the the preferred stock. The effect was a general decline in all the rallways, and prices receded a half to five and a half per cent, the extreme occurring in Marlem, which declined to 140%, as against 145% yesterday. The comparison of the highest and lowest prices is exhibited below. POLITICAL INTELLIGENCE.

Attorney General Amos T. Akerman from a Southern Standpoint. A correspondent of the Memphis Avalanche, June is, sends to that paper the following answer to an inquiry that will explain itself:—

In your issue of yesterday, speaking of the successor of Judge Hoar, you ask: "But who is Akerman, of Georgia, the new Attorney General? We have heard of Lumpkin, Nesbitt, Stephens, Hill, Wright, Joe Brown, but what bar does Akerman represent?" I can, perhaps, answer your question favorably, having known Coionel Akerman for many years, both as a private citizen and a public man. Like his great preceptor, Judge Berrien, he emigrated to Georgia in early life, and for years struggled with all the obstacles that beset a young attorney who has nothing to lean upon except his own industry and talents. He soon rose to distinction at the bar of Georgia, and was not an unworthy or unsucceastul competitor of some of those very men whose names are mentioned above. In fact, if called upon, they could all bear testimony to his ability as a jawer and his integrity as a gentleman. Ten years ago I heard Judge Lumpkin predict that the day was not far distant when Akerman would be the foremost man of the Georgia bar, which at that time numbered among its members such men as Cobo, Toombs, Nesbitt, Stephens, Dougherty and Hill. Colonel Akerman's sympathies during the rebellion were with the South, and the last days of the war found him at the front, with his armor on; but, like thousands of his countrymen, he believed the struation, though not master of it, and retired again to the more congenial pursuits of the forum. Then came the terrific struggle between the President and Congress. Colonel Akerman took sides with the latter, and in an able speech delivered at Elberton, Ga, advised his constituents to accept the foursenth amendment as the best terms they could get with the government. It was right here that he parted company with his ordest and warmest friends; but he was a positive man, and chose at the outset what he believed his countrymen would have to accept in the end, with perhaps more onerous and unpleasant conditions. His abilities w 18, sends to that paper the following answer to an inquiry that will explain itself:ne believed his countrymen would have to accept in the end, with perhaps more onerous and unpleasant conditions. His abilities were soon recognized by the present administration in appoint-ing him to the responsible position of United States District Attorney for the State of Georgia. He has aply filled the office. The writer of this article has no political views in common with Judge Akerman, yet he has full confidence in his honesty and capacity, and believes that he will reflect credit and honor upon himself and his country while ne wears the mantle of a Cabinet officer. Like thousands of able, though modest, lawyers, he may be somewhat obscure as a politician; yet let him rejoice that he is a "new mait," and that the best of his lineage is not under the ground.

ANOTHER VIEW—NOT QUITE SO "COULEUS DE ROSE." [From the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph. June 18.]

The appointment of Amos T. Akerman, of this State, lately United States District Autorney for Georgia, to the high position of Autorney General of the United States. will excite great surprise where he is not known at all, and possibly where he is best known.

the United States, will excite great surprise where he is not known at all, and possibly where he is best known.

Viewed from our standpoint, however, the fact is not at all astonishing. The timber out of which even passable law officers can be made is very scarce in the crowd to which Akerman belongs, and we do him only justice in declaring our conviction that he is about the best material, in point of ability, that was attainable. He is cold-blooded, calculating, porsistent, energetic and tireless, and hates the South and the Southern people most cordially—all of which traits, it appears to us, are likely to be very acceptable in the chief law officer for the present administration. We wish Grant's administration joy of its new haw officer, and we wish him joy of it. We think they will suit each other admirably. The administration probably needs a fresh infusion of venous against the South, and a Southern radical is the man to supply it. It indubitably needs vigor, and akeman certainly cannot make it weaker than it is. In a Cabinet where intellectual ability is regarded as worse than a crime the new Attorney General may possibly find himself at the head of the list.

The smoke surrounding the late election of United States Schator from New Hampshire does not seem to have yet cleared entirely away. The Exeter News Letter rages over the re-election of Senator Cragin, and denouaces Mr. E. H. Rawlings for "seiling out" to Mr. Cragin. The Portsmouth Chronicle asks:— "Diin't abother candidate "seil out" to Mr. Rollins
